The more espresso I drink, the slower everybody else talks.

##########################################################################

I had to go to my favorite coffee house last night because we were out of espresso here and I got to thinking that maybe we should take turns bringing in more espresso beans for the espresso coffee maker in the break room so I asked the staff there what was a good variety of espresso blend and they fixed me up with a package of their regular stuff which makes truly good espresso though you have to be very careful not to drink too much of it or you will become really wired and hyper but anyway it's in the break room next to the espresso maker only don't drink too much or you will get really wired and hyper oh I said that already didn't I well drink up and enjoy but not too much all at once okay?

##########################################################################

A Short Characterization of
Some of the People who Use the Expresso Machine

| | |
|---|---|
| People who leave the filter (with grounds) in the machine: ^^^^^^ | Earthy |
| People who take the filter off the machine but don't clean it: | Stuck-Up |
| People who put far too much milk in the container but put it back in the fridge after using it: | Run Hot and Cold |
| People who put far too much milk in the container and then leave it, half full, on the counter to spoil: | Rotten |
| People who put the right amount of milk in the container but then leave it on the counter so that the small amount of remaining milk not only spoils but also hardens in the container: | Scum |
| People who don't close the valves when they're done: | Drips |

##########################################################################